Aria University School of Medicine Capital Campaign

Aria University, located in Milpitas, California, is a private, nonprofit institution that began offering courses in 2017. Currently the university offers Master's, Diploma and Certificate programs in the Arts & Humanities and Computer Science. Aria University has received prestigious WSCUC accreditation, demonstrating its provision of high quality learning and teaching environments.

As per Liaison Committee on Medical Education (LCME), there are only 158 accredited MD schools in USA and only 13 MD schools in California. Out of the 13, there are only 4 MD Schools in Northern California, 2 public, 1 private nonprofit MD School (Stanford) and 1 private for profit MD School (Cal North State).

California, with a population of over 39 million, has only 13 MD schools and about 16.9 medical students/100,000 population, while New York with a population of 19 million has 15 MD schools and about 43.9 students/100,000 population. The San Joaquin Valley is considered as the "Health Desert" in California. Aria University School of Medicine (AUSOM) is planning to start the First Private Non-Profit MD school after 118 years (Stanford 1908) in the largest medically underserved area of Central Valley in California.

AUSOM has already signed clinical affiliation agreements with three major hospitals: St. Joseph's Medical Center, and Dameron Hospital, both in Stockton, CA, and the San Joaquin General Hospital, in French Camp, CA.

AUSOM hired Robert Suskind, MD as the Founding Dean and Vice-President of Health Sciences, an internationally recognized leader in Pediatrics, Nutrition and Medical Education. He was the Founding Dean of three other MD allopathic medical schools for more than 18 years. AUSOM also hired Alfred Tenore, MD as the Senior Associate Dean for Medical Education and Professor of Pediatrics. Dr. Tenore is a leader in developing innovative curricula and institutional affiliations both in academic medical centers and across different levels of higher education. AUSOM hired Terri Workman JD, MBA as the LCME Accreditation Leader.

After renovation

AUSOM leased a historic building from the San Joaquin County for 30 years with $1/year rent. This building is conveniently located in the San Joaquin General Hospital campus in the French Camp, CA. The building is being renovated and is expected to be ready by the first half of 2026.

Aria University School of Medicine is poised to become a beacon of excellence in medical education. Thanks to modern infrastructure, strategic staffing, and a student learning model, the school will empower future physicians to navigate their careers with knowledge, compassion, and innovation. The four years at AUSOM are filled with engaging and dynamic experiences that keep students active and motivated. By leveraging the "Global Active-Learning" curriculum, AUSOM ensures that students are encouraged to take an active role in their education using numerous interactive pedagogical methods.
